I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Committee of Experts of the Perez-Guerrero Trust Fund (PGTF) for South-South Cooperation held its fortieth meeting from 7 to 11 July 2025 pursuant to the provisions of the High-level Meeting on ECDC held in Cairo in August 1986, the rules of procedure adopted at its first meeting held in Caracas in August 1987, the provisions of the 12th Annual Ministerial Meeting of the Group of 77 held in New York in 1988, the 7th, 8th and 9th Meetings of the Intergovernmental Follow-up and Coordination Committee on South-South Cooperation (IFCC-VII, IFCC-VIII and IFCC-IX) held respectively in Kuala Lumpur in July-August 1989, in Panama City in August-September 1993 and in Manila in February 1996, and the 18th to 48th Annual Ministerial Meetings of the Group of 77 held respectively in New York from 1994 to 2024. Due to operational and logistical constraints, the meeting was held in virtual format with all the experts participating from their respective locations.

2. Dr. Eduardo Praselj, Chair of the Committee for the biennium 2024-2025, presided over the meeting. The meeting was attended by four of the six members of the Committee, representing the three regions of the Group of 77. The list of participants appears in Annex I.

3. The Trust Fund Director of the United Nations Office for South-South Cooperation (UNOSSC) and two of her associates were invited to provide information on matters related to PGTF. The Chief Investment Officer of the UNDP and one of his associates were also invited by the Committee to provide information on matters related to the yield and structure of the PGTF portfolio, as well as developments in the financial markets and investment strategies.

4. The Committee adopted the following substantive agenda:

- a) Review of the operations of the PGTF.
- b) Consideration of new project proposals.
- c) Assessment of the implementation of approved projects.
- d) Other matters.

5. The Committee had before it the following documents:

- a) Twenty-six (26) project proposals.
- b) Thirty-five (35) terminal, financial and progress reports.
- c) PGTF Annual Investment Review by the UNDP Investment Unit of the outlook of global economies and financial markets, and composition and yield of the PGTF portfolio.
- d) Reports by UNOSSC on the financial status of PGTF and the status of implementation of approved projects.

6. According to the information provided by UNOSSC and UNDP, uncommitted resources available for supporting new projects in 2025 were US$ 371,952, including projected interest earnings until 31 December 2025. and, as established in guideline A(p) for utilization of PGTF resources, the maximum support that could be given to any individual project would be one seventh of this total, i.e., US$ 53,136.

II. REVIEW OF THE OPERATIONS OF PGTF

7. An executive summary of the main operational features regarding the performance of PGTF is presented below. It includes highlights of its operations, yield and expansion of its resources, sustainability of its activities, operational arrangements, guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources, and survey on the impact of PGTF.

Highlights of thirty-eight years of operation of PGTF (1986-2024)

8. A High-level Meeting on ECDC held at Cairo in 1986, approved the main features for launching PGTF operations, including definition of the objectives of the Fund and criteria for project eligibility, as well as operational arrangements for the submission, appraisal, and approval of project proposals.

9. The Trust Fund was established in 1983 by United Nations General Assembly Resolution 38/201, with an initial core capital of US$5 million, increased subsequently to US$ 7 million by two US$ one million contributions from two member countries of the Group of 77, made respectively in 2004 and 2015. As established in guideline F(f) for utilization of its resources, the initial US$ 5 million should be preserved intact and only interest accruing on the Fund could be used to support projects. The same criterion has been applied regarding additional contributions to the core capital. Accumulated interest earnings since the establishment of the Fund amount to US$ 13.6 million. In addition to the contributions to the core capital, PGTF received US$ 2.4 million in contributions from member countries of the Group of 77 and US$ 0.2 million from one international financial institution, which were directly utilized to support projects.

10. From 1986 to 2024, 1,106 project proposals were submitted to PGTF, and the Fund has provided support to 410 eligible projects. Total allocation to these projects was US$ 16.9 million, an annual average of 10.8 projects totaling US$ 446,000. Cumulative disbursements to approved projects were US$ 13.5 million up to 31 December 2024.

11. With the objective of increasing the multiplier effect of PGTF resources, guideline A(m) for utilization of PGTF requires that project sponsors secure contributions from other sources of an amount at least equal to the contribution requested from PGTF. Contributions from other sources for the 1986-2024 period totaled US$ 31.5 million, i.e., US$ 1.86 for each US$ of PGTF resources, and thus the aggregate value of PGTF-supported projects attains US$ 48.5 million.

12. Three priority areas have received 64 percent of total support from PGTF, namely technical cooperation, food and agriculture, and trade. A breakdown of resources allocated by priority area is provided below:

Area	Number of projects	Share of allocated resources (%)

13. Approved projects have benefited many developing countries as well as institutions and people within these countries. So far, 134 developing countries have been direct participants in and/or beneficiaries of PGTF-funded projects, while all member countries of the Group of 77 (141 developing countries, including former members) have been collective beneficiaries of PGTF-funded projects carried out by many regional or interregional institutions and organizations of the South. Interregional and sub-regional projects have received the largest support from PGTF as indicated in the breakdown below:

14. As of 7 July 2025, 91 percent of approved projects, i.e., 372 out of 410, accounting for 91 percent of allocated resources, have either been completed (312) are under implementation (59) or under preparation, still to be implemented (1) as shown in the table below:

15. Many national, regional, and international institutions of the South have implemented projects supported by PGTF. Implementing institutions include 152 national and 41 regional and international institutions, as detailed below. These figures do not include numerous national institutions that have participated in and/or benefited from the activities of PGTF-supported projects but did not have the primary responsibility in their implementation.

Yield of PGTF resources

16. The Committee reviewed with the Chief Investment Officer of the UNDP the status of the PGTF portfolio and yield of PGTF resources, in keeping with the recommendations contained in paragraphs 20-23 of the report of the Committee at its ninth meeting in 1994.

17. Total PGTF resources are constituted by the core capital (US$ 7 million) plus unexpended resources. As established in guideline F(f) for utilization of PGTF resources, the core capital should be preserved intact and only interest accrued and other earnings (i.e., additional contributions, reversion of allocated resources from approved projects that were not implemented, unspent balances of completed projects) could be used for supporting new projects.

18. PGTF resources are invested by the UNDP in accordance with its financial rules and regulations, and the investment policy is discussed and agreed upon with the PGTF Committee of Experts. Accordingly, the portfolio is fully invested with total holdings on a par value basis of US$ 8,337,346 as of 9 July 2025. The market value of the portfolio as of 9 July 2025 was US$ 8,092,671.

19. The portfolio as of 9 July 2025 consisted of eighteen bonds totaling US$ 8,030,000 (which represent 96.3 % of total holdings), while the rest of the portfolio is kept as liquidity in a money market fund (US$ 307,346 representing 3.7 %). Bonds' maturities are staggered in a ladder structure: eleven bonds have maturities below five years, from 2025 to 2030 (US$ 5,400,000 or 64.8 % of total holdings), and seven longer-term bonds mature from 2031 to 2035 (US$ 2,630,000 or 31.5 %). The average maturity of PGTF portfolio is 47 months and a breakdown of the portfolio is presented below:

Security	Par value (US$)	Market value (US$) as of 9 July 2025	Maturity date	% of total portfolio

20. According to the information provided in the PGTF Annual Investment Review prepared by the Chief Investment Officer of the UNDP, the main recent developments in the financial markets still show high levels of uncertainty, despite the economic and fiscal policies adopted in the recent past:

(1) Overview:

- Imposition and pausing of tariffs among different countries are increasing uncertainty
- Geopolitical events are taking back seats.
- Economic growth is softening in some regions, but remains robust in the United States
- IMF global GDP growth figures: 3.2% in 2024 to 2.8% for 2025 (estimated) and 3.0% for 2026 (estimated).
- IMF global inflation figures: 5.7% in 2024 declining to 4.39% in 2025 (estimated) and 3.6% in 2026 (estimated).

(2) Financial markets performance:

- Equities continue to rally in 2025 (the MSCI All Country World Index increased 10% year-to-date but was down 12% in early April 2025).
- The U.S. dollar depreciated 10% in 2025 (year-to-date).
- Yield on U.S. 2-year note ranged between 3.60% and 4.40% over the past six months, currently is around 3.90%.

(3) Global monetary and fiscal policies:

- Central banks are mostly on an easing cycle; but there is some recent hesitation given the current uncertainty.

- The last rate cut by the US Federal Reserve took place in December 2024 and two more rate cuts are expected by year end.

(4) Investment strategies

- The most suitable maturity profile is holding duration above target to lock in the current elevated level of interest rates.
- The US Treasury rate curve is trending higher (2-year interest vs.10-year: +50 basis points vs. minus 50 basis points in mid-2024),
- Short term (less than one year) reinvestment rates are roughly 4.00% (Treasury bills) to 4.15% (commercial paper)
- Focus on near term liquidity given funding uncertainties

21. Funds available for reinvestment for the first half of 2026 would be around US$ 2.6 million, this total including the proceeds from maturities of four bonds (US$ 2.6 million); money market holdings (US$ 0.3 million by mid-July 2025); and interest income (US$ 0.27 million) and contributions until mid-2026 (unknown), after deduction of liquidity requirements to meet disbursements to approved projects (around US$ 0.4 million). Based on the above, the Committee recommended the following investment strategy:

- Reinvest US$ 2.0 million in the first quarter of 2026 and US$ 0.6 million in the second quarter in longer-term securities with an A- or better credit rating, to lock in elevated rates, bearing in mind to maintain the weighted average credit rating of the portfolio at AA- or better.
- Reinvest the available liquidity in money market funds.

22. Nominal yield of PGTF portfolio for 2025 is estimated at 3.02 percent, but after adjusting for the purchase price of the securities, the effective yield would be 3.30 percent. It should be noted that the effective yield has exceeded 3 percent per annum for only the second time since 2013, mainly because of the increase in interest rates in recent times after almost two decades of extremely low interest rates.

Year	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025

23. Based on PGTF portfolio as of 30 June 2025, the projected interest earnings for 2025 would be US$ 274,391. A breakdown of the securities' earnings is shown in the table below:

Security	Par value (US$)	Buy date	Maturity date	Coupon rate (%)	Buy price (% of par value)	Coupon payment (US$)	Yield to maturity (%)	Effective 2025 income (US$)

24. Performance of the PGTF portfolio has been measured on a quarterly basis against a benchmark (i.e., 5-year U.S. Treasury) since the beginning of 2010 and the PGTF portfolio has consistently outperformed the benchmark until the first quarter of 2022. From this point the benchmark rates experienced a sharp increase, but adjustment of the PGTF portfolio to the new market conditions has been gradual subject to the securities' maturities, as shown in the table below:

25. While the adopted investment strategy represents the best option in the current scenario, estimated interest earnings would only be US$ 274,391 for 2025. In addition, available resources for supporting projects in 2025 have increased by US$ 97,561 coming from contributions by member countries since the last meeting of the Committee in July 2024 (US$ 110,008) and non-recurrent items (minus US$ 12,447). The latter are due to actual 2024 interest earnings lower than the original estimate (minus US$ 2,625), return of unspent balances of completed projects (US$ 7,213) and other adjustments (minus US$ 17,035). In summary, total availability for 2024 is US$ 371,952.

26. It should be noted that the average annual availability for the 2021-2025 period has been some 15% lower than the average availability for the 2001-2010 and 2011-2020 periods. A breakdown of the annual availability of funds since 1990 is shown in the table below:

Sustainability of PGTF activities

27. PGTF was initially designed to operate solely based on the interest earnings of its core capital. This assumption remained valid during the first 13 years of operations of the Fund, due to a combination of prevailing high interest rates and a low demand for support, resulting from the initial limited awareness of the existence and potential of PGTF among the institutions of the developing world. Since the early 2000s this situation changed dramatically as interest rates plummeted due to the policies adopted by the main world economies while the demand for support grew significantly as awareness of the value and potential of PGTF increased and many institutions of the South approached the Fund with good project proposals.

28. The low interest rates environment prevailed for almost two decades and up to 2023 they remained at very low levels (below 3%), compounded during the Covid-19 years by the measures taken by the central banks and governments of the major economies to mitigate the negative economic of the pandemic. The resulting sharp increase of inflationary pressures worldwide has stimulated the central banks to adopt tightening policies, which resulted in important interest rates hikes starting in 2023.

29. The yield of the PGTF portfolio could only be adjusted gradually to the increase in interest rates as maturing securities were reinvested at higher rates. As a result, the yield has increased from 2.70% in 2023 to 3.30% estimated for 2025, representing a 20% increase in interest earnings (from US$ 229,000 in 2022 to US$ 275,000 in 2025). However, interest earnings from the PGTF portfolio have remained at very low levels and makes it critical and urgent to supplement interest earnings with the mobilization of additional resources if PGTF is to remain responsive to the requests for support and relevant as a catalytic financial mechanism of South-South cooperation. Moreover, even if the level of PGTF support has been preserved to a certain extent in nominal terms, due to the accumulated inflation it has decreased in real terms.

30. During the past 25 years, a sustained resource mobilization effort has been carried out mainly through appeals for contributions by the member countries of the Group of 77 made at the Annual Ministerial Meetings of the Group as well as direct contacts with prospective contributors. The member countries responded to these appeals and to date PGTF has received contributions that totaled US$ 4.5 million, including two US$ 1 million contributions to the core capital, which was increased from the original US$ 5 million to US$ 7 million. The impact of these contributions has been to double the earnings from the original US$ 5 million core capital and partially preserve the above-mentioned decline in interest rates that started in 2000.

31. These initiatives are commendable but unfortunately they are not enough in the present scenario and a new resource-mobilization strategy is needed. In this connection, the Committee reiterated the recommendation made at the two past meetings of developing detailed and time-bound plans, in consultation with the Chair of the Group of 77 and the Executive Secretariat of the Group, as soon as feasible.

32. To this end, the Committee held in 2023 a special brainstorming session to identify the most suitable resource mobilization strategy and recommend it to the Group of 77. This session was preceded by several fact-finding and preparatory activities, aimed at focusing on the critical and feasible elements of the strategy. The matter was taken up again by the Committee at the current session and the main recommendations to the Group of 77 are as follows::

- (1) The main objective of the resource mobilization effort should be to increase the core capital of PGTF to provide more predictability and growth potential for PGTF resources. Due to the recent hikes in interest rates, increasing the core capital and investing the resources in long-term securities has become much more effective and meaningful compared to the previous extremely low-interest rate scenario, where yields of long-term securities were also extremely low.
- (2) Setting up a target represents a challenge but also a stimulus for resource mobilization and in this regard, the Committee suggests setting an indicative target of increasing the core capital to at least US$ 10 million, which represents an increase of US$ 3 million over the current core capital.
- (3) The focus of the resource mobilization effort should be the member countries of the Group, while other potential donors should be approached in due course as a complement to the central role to be played by the member countries. In this regard, the Committee suggested making targeted appeals to members in a position to make larger contributions,
- (4) The Committee also recommended to request members to consider becoming regular contributors to PGTF, with a view to instilling more predictability and stability to PGTF available resources.
- (5) The Committee recommends further that, in addition to the regular appeal for contributions that is made at the Annual Ministerial Meeting of the Group, a special appeal at the highest level for contributions to the core capital be made by the Chair of the Group

33. As part of the discussions at the brainstorming session, the Committee identified several international institutions, including development funds and foundations, having the potential to contribute to the resources of PGTF. In this regard, the Committee will work with the Chair of the Group and the Executive Secretariat to define the most suitable approach and prepare the required background documentation.

34. While developing and implementing the new resource-mobilization strategy, the Committee recommended continuing the existing one approved in 1996, with a focus on targeting prospective members of the Group in a position to make significant contributions that may contribute to maintaining the responsiveness and relevance of PGTF as a suitable support mechanism for South-South cooperation.

Expansion of PGTF resources

35. The Committee carried out its regular review of practical ways of implementing its recommendations regarding the expansion of the PGTF resources, as identified by the Committee and approved in 1996 by the 20th Annual Ministerial Meeting of the Group of 77. Identified options available for expanding PGTF resources fall within one of the following three categories: (a) increase of the resources of PGTF; (b) increase of the yield of the PGTF portfolio; and (c) increase of the multiplier effect of PGTF resources through co-financing with other institutions.

(a) Increase of the resources of PGTF

36. This option consists of enlisting contributions from potential donors, which may include interested developing and developed countries as well as intergovernmental and non-governmental institutions and organizations. While the main source of contributions so far has been the member countries of the Group, the Committee felt that other avenues should be explored to supplement the efforts of the Group.

37. Cumulative contributions received by PGTF from 1997 up to 7 July 2025 amount to US$ 4,704,331, distributed as follows:

Contributors	Contributions (US$)	%
Member countries of the Group of 77.....	4,504,331	96
International institutions.....	200,000	4
TOTAL	4,704,331	100

A breakdown of these contributions is presented in the section below.

40. In summary, PGTF has received two-hundred-forty-eight (248) contributions from fifty-seven (57) developing countries up to 7 July 2025. Total amount paid of these contributions is US$ 4,504,331, including two contributions to its core capital of US$ 1 million each made respectively by Venezuela and Oman. A breakdown of the contributions by size is presented below:

(*) Seventeen countries have made both smaller and larger contributions.

41. The Committee also noted with satisfaction that thirty-four (34) developing countries have made multiple contributions to PGTF, namely South Africa (twenty-three separate contributions); Algeria (twenty-one contributions); China (nineteen contributions); Trinidad and Tobago (eighteen contributions); Indonesia (fifteen contributions); Peru (thirteen contributions); Philippines (eleven contributions); Argentina (nine contributions); Venezuela (eight contributions); Democratic People's Republic of Korea and United Arab Emirates (seven contributions each); Chile and Qatar (six contributions each); Thailand (five contributions); Islamic Republic of Iran, Mauritius, Singapore, Uruguay, and Viet Nam (four contributions each); Afghanistan, Antigua and Barbuda, Cyprus, Egypt, Jamaica, and Kuwait (three contributions each); Azerbaijan, Brazil, Cambodia, Cameroon, Colombia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Namibia, Pakistan, and the State of Palestine (two contributions each). The Committee invited other countries to follow this encouraging example.

42. As indicated in paragraphs 15-20 of the report of its special meeting held in June 2003, the Committee recommended two mutually supportive approaches to enlist contributions from member countries of the Group of 77, namely (i) to request smaller contributions (i.e. a notional amount of US$ 2,000 was suggested) from all member countries as a sign of the commitment of the largest possible number; and (ii) to request larger contributions from member countries in a position to contribute more.

43. The Doha Plan of Action, adopted by the Second South Summit, held in Doha from 12 to 16 June 2005, and the Outcome Document adopted by the Third South Summit, held on Kampala on 21 and 22 January 2024, welcomed the results achieved so far by PGTF in support of South-South cooperation and called upon all countries to support the expansion of PGTF resources.

Contributions by international institutions

44. Consultations have been held with several international institutions aimed at exploring their interest in either making contributions to PGTF resources or co-financing projects with PGTF. The experience so far indicates that a flexible and practical approach should be adopted to find common grounds for undertaking joint activities from the point of view of both areas of interest or priority and working procedures.

45. In late 2006, a Grant Agreement was signed by the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and PGTF, providing for a contribution of US$ 200,000 over a two (2) year period. This contribution provided support to six (6) projects that were successfully completed (cf. INT/08/K02, INT/08/K05 and INT/08/K09 in 2007, and INT/10/K01, INT/10/K02 and INT/10/K11 in 2009). A small unspent balance of US$ 11,300 was reimbursed to IFAD.

Contributions by other institutions

46. Consultations have been held in the past with several private foundations aimed at exploring their interest in making contributions to PGTF resources. There have been no positive results so far, mainly due to the difficulties in matching mandates, areas of interest, project cycles and operating modalities of the institutions approached and those of PGTF. Other foundations have been identified and will be approached to explore their interest and potential as contributors to PGTF resources.

Impact of contributions to PGTF resources

47. Due to the sizeable reduction in interest rates in recent years, contributions have become more critical in supplementing interest earnings and thus partially preserving the responsiveness of PGTF to the growing demand for supporting South-South cooperation. As indicated in the table below, in 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, 2024 and 2025 (up to 7 July 2025) contributions respectively increased by 162, 143, 136, 90, 72 and 46 percent the resources provided by interest earnings of the initial core capital.

48. Impact of new contributions on PGTF resources for the 2020-2025 period is shown in the table below:

Impact of new contributions	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025

(b) Increase of the yield of the PGTF portfolio

49. Investment strategies adopted by PGTF aim at taking advantage of prevailing market conditions at any given moment, bearing in mind that preservation of PGTF core resources should be the paramount consideration when exploring investment options. In 2003, following a request by the Committee of Experts, the UNDP Investment Committee approved that up to 20 percent of PGTF portfolio could be invested in securities issued by supranational and government agencies with up to ten-year maturities to increase returns. Following further requests by the Committee of Experts in 2014 and 2015, the UNDP Investment Committee approved total flexibility regarding the share of maturities exceeding five years in PGTF portfolio. Given current market conditions, 31.5 percent of PGTF portfolio has been invested in securities with maturities between five and ten years.

(c) Increase of the multiplier effect of PGTF resources through co-financing with other institutions

50. Since the launching of PGTF operations in 1986, the impact of PGTF-funded projects has been increased by the mobilization of resources from other sources, which up to end-2024 totaled US$ 31.5 million, that is US$1.86 for every US$1 of PGTF contributions. As an example, a list of selected regional and international institutions that have co-financed projects with PGTF is shown in the table below:

Co-financing Regional and international institution	Number of projects co-financed	Contribution by co-financing institution (US$)	PGTF contribution (US$)
International Center for Small Hydropower (IC-SHP)	18	1,504,300	683,000
Latin American Economic System (SELA)	17	1,299,000	651,000
Islamic Chamber of Commerce and Development (ICCD)	17	824,900	518,000
Latin American Integration Association (ALADI)	4	710,000	225,000
Mercosur Economic Research Network (MercoNet)	8	683,000	220,100
Third World Network (TWN)	2	323,000	180,000
Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) Science & Technology Center	5	238,000	149,000
Interamerican Institute for Cooperation on Agriculture (IICA)	4	208,600	160,000
Inter Press Service (IPS)	4	194,600	265,800
Caribbean Council of Science and Technology (CCST)	5	184,500	150,000
International Cooperative Alliance (American Regional Bureau)	2	164,000	126,500
United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)	2	148,000	87,000
Sub-total	88	6,533,900	3,415,400
Other co-financing institutions (29)	36	4,992,500	2,652,500
TOTAL (41 institutions)	124	11,526,400	6,067,900

51. The Committee recommended continuing consultations with these institutions, as well as with other institutions interested in co-financing projects with the PGTF, to identify further opportunities for enhancing the multiplier effect of PGTF resources.

52. In addition to the case-by-case approach established in guideline A(m) for utilization of PGTF, which requires that all proposals submitted to PGTF should include inputs from other sources of an amount at least equal to the resources requested from PGTF, efforts have been made to achieve structured agreements with some institutions, aimed at providing more continuity and predictability to co-financing activities. However, experience has proven that established priorities, legal and financial regulations, and working procedures of many institutions render it difficult to go beyond the case-by-case approach.

Review of the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources

53. The Committee, as part of its regular review of PGTF operations and performance, examined the existing set of guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources. In this regard, the Committee's opinion was that the existing guidelines provide a clear and practical framework regarding the criteria for eligibility of proposals, appraisal and evaluation of project proposals, project approval, coordination, and follow-up, and concluded that no amendments or additions are needed at the present stage.

54. One important task of the Committee, as required by guideline B(b), is to recommend for approval a list of proposals with the respective allocation of resources. In this regard, when the resources requested by eligible proposals exceed the availability of resources, it is necessary to prioritize the proposals and the allocation of resources is based on the specific merits of the proposals, country coverage, multiplier effect of PGTF resources, and equitable geographical distribution.

55. The practical implication of the above combination of criteria is that a two-round process of prioritization is carried out when there are imbalances between the number of eligible proposals submitted by institutions from a given country and the total number of eligible proposals, or when the total number of eligible proposals largely exceed resources available. In this regard, the first prioritization round takes place among the proposals from the same country, and the second round includes all eligible proposals. In the first round of prioritization, several criteria are utilized to rank the proposals coming from the same country, including both formal and substantive elements. On the one hand, factors such as number of participating countries, other inputs to the project, the minimum contribution required to launch the project, nature of the submitting institution and its participation in previous PGTF-supported projects, among others, are considered within the formal elements. On the other hand, substantive elements are the priority areas addressed by the project; short and medium-term impact, including capacity building, employment generation, health, and sustainable development-related matters; substance of the project; reasonability of the budget structure; and collective judgement by the Committee regarding relative priorities of the proposals. With a view to ensuring that the funding provided to the proposals selected is meaningful for implementing the projects and that available resources are not spread too thin, some eligible proposals having a lower relative priority would not avail from the financing of PGTF at this time.

Operating arrangements

56. The Committee examined the operating arrangements of PGTF and agreed to focus on follow up of the implementation of approved projects and dissemination of information on PGTF.

57. The Committee would like to commend the Executive Secretariat of the Group for the excellent support provided in the preparation, servicing, and follow-up of the present meeting, which enabled a better decision-making process by the Committee.

58. Likewise, the documentation prepared by the United Nations Office for South-South Cooperation (UNOSSC) for the meeting of the Committee, including the financial status of PGTF, the commitments of PGTF to approved projects, availability of resources to support new projects, collection of final reports of completed projects and detailed information of progress made in the implementation of ongoing projects, provided accurate and reliable information that facilitated the work of the Committee and led to a better decision-making process. The Committee commended the excellent work of the UNOSSC staff in this regard and highlighted that all the projects approved by the past Annual Ministerial Meeting of the Group of 77 in September 2024 were already under implementation, evidencing more efficient processing and hence a reduction in the time elapsed between approval of projects and commencement of implementation.

59. The Committee would also like to commend the excellent documentation and analysis by the UNDP Investment Unit regarding the situation and outlook of the financial markets, as well as the identification of suitable reinvestment opportunities of the proceeds of maturing securities, which contributed to achieving a higher interest income compared to initial expectations.

60. The Committee was informed that the information available in the PGTF section of the website of the Group of 77 (www.g77.org) has been expanded and that the summaries of completed projects posted on the website are available in English, French and Spanish, as a means of facilitating access to the information contained in the full texts of the final reports, posted in their original languages. So far 262 final reports in their original languages were posted on the website, covering the following priority areas: food and agriculture (65 reports), consulting services, training and other TCDC activities (85 reports), trade (18 reports), technology (24 reports), information exchange and dissemination (11 reports), and other (59 reports). Translation into French and Spanish of the summaries of the seventeen (17) projects completed since the last meeting of the Committee is currently underway.

61. The Committee noted that, even though many institutions of the South have already approached PGTF and are familiar with the guidelines and procedures for submitting proposals, newcomers may find some difficulties in interpreting the requisites for applying for PGTF support. To this end, the Committee reiterated its recommendations made in previous meetings:

- (a) to request preparation by the Executive Secretariat of the Group of 77 of a small brochure on PGTF, containing the guidelines in all the working languages of the Group, the model format, the checklist, a short list of the key indicators of PGTF performance, and a list of frequently asked questions. This brochure would provide quick and user-friendly guidance to those institutions interested in approaching PGTF and submitting proposals.
- (b) to consider preparation of an institutional video presentation on PGTF, displaying its key features, which could serve as a vibrant and attractive marketing tool to increase awareness and promote the Fund through any appropriate means, including social media.

Survey of the impact of PGTF

62. Based on the recommendation of the Committee at its twelfth meeting in 1997, a survey on the impact and benefits of the projects funded by PGTF was initiated in 1998, with a view to supporting the promotion of the Fund. To date the Executive Secretariat of the Group of 77 has received information on 261 of the 312 PGTF-supported projects that have been completed. A summary of the results of the survey is presented in Annex III of this report.

III. CONSIDERATION OF NEW PROJECT PROPOSALS

63. The Committee had before it twenty-six (26) project proposals submitted to PGTF prior to the established deadline of 30 April 2025. The titles of these proposals are listed below:

64. The following proposal was received after the established deadline of 30 April 2025 and was not considered by the Committee at its fortieth meeting.

- (1) Neglected zoonosis in Latin America: trilateral cooperation for the identification of novel treatment and diagnosis candidates of cestodiasis.

65. According to the provisions of guideline A(p) for utilization of PGTF resources, the Executive Secretariat of the Group of 77 should request the submitting entity to resubmit this late proposal not later than 30 April 2026, in its original form or updated as appropriate, for consideration at the forty-first meeting of the Committee in 2026.

Project proposal No. 1 – UbukiAI – AIoT powered Chatbot for improved honey production and marketing in Rwanda, Uganda and Botswana.

66. UnIPod Rwanda under the College of Science and Technology of the University of Rwanda, based in Kigali, Rwanda, directly submitted the proposal. Other participating countries would be Botswana (through Unipod Botswana under the University of Botswana, based in Gaborone) and Uganda (through Unipod Uganda under the Makerere University, based in Kampala). The three countries are part of a twelve-country network of national Unipods powered by the UNDP Timbuktoo initiative.

67. Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Internet of Things (IoT) are two emerging technologies that have revolutionized the agricultural sector by enabling automation of several agri-related services, thereby making precision agriculture a reality, promising improved food security and subsequently improved health and wellbeing.

68. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at developing an AIoT powered chatbot called UbukiAI to support beekeepers in timely monitoring their apiary but also get timely relevant information on beekeeping. Two sources of information will be used by the chatbot, namely (a) direct data from the sensors of the smart beehive and (b) information and data extracted and processed from different sources like social media, the web, and data provided by experts. The app, which will be powered by ChatGPT-4, will support three languages, namely Kinyarwanda, English and French.

69. The total cost of the project is estimated at US$ 50,000, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. There is no indication of the source of other inputs (US$ 15,000). Moreover, there is no indication of the duration of the project and there is no detailed budget.

70. The Committee considered that this proposal does not comply with guideline A(f), for utilization for PGTF resources, which requires that for nationally executed projects to be eligible, the cooperative component of the project should be established through the identification and declared interest of and explicit participation by the other participating countries as potential beneficiaries of the activities of the project. Accordingly, written evidence of endorsement should be part of the proposal. Even though the participating institutions are identified in the documentation as part of a 12-country network, the supporting documentation contains no letters of endorsement from these other countries. Furthermore, according to guideline A(m), inputs from other sources should be of an amount at least equal to the resources requested from PGTF. Given that other inputs amount to US$ 15,000, this sum would be the maximum support that PGTF could provide for this project. In conclusion, the proposal, as submitted, is not eligible for funding.

71. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF. However, given the importance of the subject, the Committee invited the submitting entity to review the proposal and resubmit an eligible revised version before the deadline of the next project cycle (30 April 2026), to be considered by the Committee.

Project proposal No. 2 - Proposal for the supply of books and printed material to nine public libraries for strengthening the reading and educational assistance programs for the community of the Ibagué municipality in the Tolima Department of Colombia, in the framework of the program of leadership seminars for the XXI century developed by the Ibagué Municipality for 2025.

72. Fares Libros, a Colombian bookshop specialized in international books, based in Ibagué, Tolima Department, Colombia, directly submitted the proposal. No other participating countries were identified in the supporting documentation.

73. The United Nations 2030 Agenda is an inclusive framework with seventeen Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) referring to economic, environmental and social development. In this context, libraries are fundamental institutions for achieving these goals. A 2022 United Nations document presents, in a detailed manner, the strategies to be followed by libraries to implement the SDGs. In Colombia, they play a predominant role due to its commitments to social issues like the recent peace treaties and the cooperation programs that several western nations have implemented in Colombia, among others. The library, in its role as a meeting point of the community, a gathering center of all the cultural, social and political programs, and a neutral space for the dissemination of all the initiatives and municipal, departmental and national public policies, is the best placed institution to educate the population and bring residents closer to the ongoing international issues, through public access to information.

74. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at the intellectual thriving and modernization of the Ibagué community through development of activities associated to reading and writing, training assistance and life skills, supported by the strengthening of nine public libraries of the municipality. Specific objectives are (a) to acquire books for nine public libraries of the municipality, with contents including different disciplines and branches of knowledge; (b) to strengthen the reading and writing skills of the Ibagué citizens with the support of bibliographic materials; and (c) to provide training assistance for human development, through a workshop aimed at the Ibagué community, as a tool for strengthening the libraries.

75. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in three (3) months, is estimated at US$ 5,000, the totality of which is the contribution requested from PGTF. It should be noted that there is an inconsistency between the above-mentioned total cost and the figures in the detailed budget, which totals US$ 4,000. Based on the latter, a breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

	Total contribution (US$)
Item	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	1,000	0	1,000
Acquisition of books	3,000	0	3,000
Total	4,000	0	4,000

76. The Committee considered that both the scope and activities of the proposal correspond to a project of a national nature, which is not eligible for funding according to the provisions of guideline A(f) for utilization of PGTF resources. Moreover, the proposal does not contain inputs from other sources, as required by guideline A(m), which establishes that proposals should contain inputs from other sources of an amount at least equal to the resources requested from PGTF. The Committee therefore recommended that it should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 3 - Design and implementation of a rural financial education program in the Tolima Department of Colombia aimed at achieving later the launching of a payment Fintech App for the department's agricultural producers in 2025.

77. Fares Libros, a Colombian bookshop specialized in international books, based in Ibagué, Tolima Department, Colombia, directly submitted the proposal. No other participating countries were identified in the supporting documentation.

78. The rural sector in Colombia and a large part of Latin America have been left apart by the technological and productive strategies, and this explains why the associative and cooperative models, with few exceptions, have not been able to pervade as alternatives in the productive tissue of the region and hence has hindered its access to international markets. In this context, while significant progress has been achieved in digital financial transactions, many rural people still rely on cash as the ultimate financial and payment tool. While transition to digital systems will take place sooner than later, it is not possible for digital products, not clearly understood, to enter the market without a previous socialization process. To this end, DESA (Desarrollo Agrícola), an organization that provides financial services to small and medium-size rural producers through digital payment systems, proposes to design and conduct a financial education program aimed at rural producers of the Tolima Department, with the ultimate objective of introducing a Fintech app to support their financial transactions.

79. According to the text of the proposal, the overall objective of the project is to transform, through financial and technological training, the rural communities from 32 municipalities in the Tolima Department towards the concept of a financial app during 2025. Specific objectives are (a) to attain 80% positioning and corporate recall of the DESA organization in the rural communities of the 32 municipalities; (b) to achieve 80% training in basic financial concepts in these communities; (c) to achieve 80% knowledge of technological concepts and basic smartphone utilization in these communities; and (d) to consolidate 90% downloads of the Desa app by the participants on the financial and technological training.

80. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in thirty (30) months, is estimated at US$ 150,000, the totality of which is the contribution requested from PGTF. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	36,000	0	36,000
Travel	28,000	0	28,000
Software design (DESA app)	60,000	0	60,000
Equipment	8,450	0	8,450
Other	17,550	0	17,550
Total	150,000	0	150,000

81. The Committee considered that both the scope and activities of the proposal correspond to a project of a national nature, which is not eligible for funding according to the provisions of guideline A(f) for utilization of PGTF resources. Moreover, the proposal does not contain input from other sources, as required by guideline A(m), which establishes that proposals should contain inputs from other sources of an amount at least equal to the resources requested from PGTF. The Committee therefore recommended that it should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 4 - Workshop for empowering communities through microfinance.

82. The Islamic Chamber of Commerce & Development (ICCD), based in Karachi, Pakistan submitted the proposal through the Permanent Observer Mission of the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) to the United Nations. The proposal was endorsed by the Standing Committee for Economic and Commercial Cooperation (COMCEC) of the OIC (Resolution of the 40^o Session of the COMCEC of the OIC, held in Istanbul, Türkiye, on 2-5 November 2024). Participating countries would be fifteen (15) member states of the OIC, namely Benin, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Chad, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Somalia, and Uganda.

83. In many developing countries, financial exclusion remains a critical barrier to economic growth and poverty reduction. A significant portion of the population, particularly low-income individuals, rural communities, and women lacks access to formal financial services such as credit, savings accounts, and insurance. This exclusion limits opportunities for entrepreneurship, income generation, and economic stability, perpetuating cycles of poverty and inequality. Despite growing global recognition of financial inclusion as a driver of sustainable development, many individuals remain unbanked or underbanked due to systemic challenges. Conventional banking institutions often do not reach remote areas, leaving residents reliant on informal and insecure financial systems. Additionally, cultural norms, lack of financial literacy, and gender-based barriers further restrict women's access to microfinance services, diminishing their ability to invest in businesses, educate their children, and improve household wellbeing. Microfinance has proven to be a powerful tool in bridging this financial gap by providing small-scale financial services tailored to underserved populations. However, challenges such as limited outreach, inadequate infrastructure, and a lack of awareness about responsible financial management hinder the full potential of microfinance programs in many regions.

84. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at addressing these challenges by enhancing financial literacy, expanding access to microfinance services, and strengthening local capacity to sustain financial inclusion efforts. To this end, a workshop with the following objectives will be organized, namely (a) to define microfinance and its role in financial inclusion; (b) to identify the key benefits of microfinance for individuals and communities; (c) to analyze challenges faced by underserved populations in accessing financial services; (d) to examine the impact of microfinance on poverty reduction and economic empowerment; (e) to develop strategies to boost financial literacy and micro finance awareness, promoting South-South cooperation and a multiplier effect through community-level knowledge sharing; and (f) to understand the importance of community engagement and collaboration with local microfinance institutions.

85. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in two (2) days, is estimated at US$ 70,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 35,000) will be provided by ICCD, the submitting institution, and the host country of the workshop. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	5,000	()	()
Travel	30,000	()	()
Other	0	()	()
Total	35,000	35,000	70,000

(*) No breakdown was provided in the supporting documents.

86. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 35,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 5 - Food safety and security using appropriate innovative technology

87. The Food Innovation and Packaging Center under the Faculty of Agroindustry of the Chiang Mai University, based in Chiang Mai, Thailand, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Thailand to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Lao People's Democratic Republic (through the Souphanouvong University, based in Luang Prabang), and Viet Nam (through the Nong Lam University, based in Ho Chi Minh City).

88. In the post-COVID era, the Lancang-Mekong region continues to face critical challenges in food safety and security, especially among small and medium-sized food producers. Although the immediate crisis of the pandemic has subsided, its long-term impact has transformed consumer expectations, supply chains, and food production systems. There is now a growing demand for safe, hygienic, and traceable food, not only for public health but also for maintaining consumer trust in the "new normal life". In the participating countries foodborne illnesses and poor postharvest practices continue to hinder food security. Many local food producers still lack access to appropriate technologies, risk management tools, and basic training in food safety standards. Transition to the new normal requires a shift in mindset and practice: from reactive to proactive food safety management, from traditional methods to technology-assisted processing, and from fragmented responses to integrated community-based food security solutions.

89. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at enhancing local capacities, promoting innovative and context-specific technologies, and building a foundation for long-term food security and economic resilience in the region. Main project activities include (a) carrying a baseline assessment to identify the specific needs and challenges of local food producers, small and medium-size enterprises, and community-based enterprises; (b) conducting targeted training programs, based on the assessment, to improve knowledge and practices related to food safety standards, such as good hygiene practices (GHP), good manufacturing practices (GMP), and hazard analysis and critical control points (HACCP); (c) developing and training local risk managers, who will play a key role in supporting implementation on the ground; and (d) transferring practical and context-specific food processing and preservation technologies.

90. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in twelve (12) months, is estimated at US$ 45,000, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 10,000 in kind) would be provided by the submitting institution. A breakdown of the total cost is presented in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	5,000	()	()
Travel	5,000	()	()
Subcontracts	3,000	()	()
Training	20,000	()	()
Other	2,000	()	()
Total	35,000	10,000	45,000

(*) No breakdown was provided in the supporting documentation

91. The Committee noted that other inputs in this proposal (US$ 10,000) are much lower than the contribution requested from PGTF (US$ 35,000). Therefore, according to the provisions of guideline A(m) for utilization of PGTF resources, which requires that inputs from other sources should be at least equal to the resources requested from PGTF, the maximum support that could be provided to this proposal is US$ 10,000. Following a review of the detailed budget, this sum is not enough to provide meaningful support of the proposal, especially because the submitting entity indicated that the minimum contribution needed for launching the project is much higher.

92. The Committee therefore considered that this proposal, as submitted, is not eligible for funding and recommended that it should not avail from the financing of PGTF. However, due to the relevance of the subject addressed by the proposal, the Committee invited the submitting entity to review the proposal and resubmit an eligible revised version before the deadline of the next project cycle (30 April 2026), to be considered by the Committee.

Project proposal No. 6 – Empowering teacher educators in Southeast Asia through Computing Integrated STEM Education and Machine Learning for sustainable innovation.

93. The Faculty of Education of the Kasetsart University, based in Bangkok, Thailand, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Thailand to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Lao People’s Democratic Republic (through the University of Laos, based in Vientiane), Philippines (through the Philippine Normal University, based in Manila) and Viet Nam (through the University of Social Sciences and Humanities (USSH-VNUHCM), based in Hanoi). An endorsement letter from the Association of Southeast Asian Teacher Education Network (AsTEN), based in Manila, was included in the supporting documentation.

94. Teacher educators in Southeast Asia face significant challenges integrating advanced technologies, particularly computing and machine learning, with STEM (science, technology, engineering and mathematics) education. Machine learning, a subset of artificial intelligence (AI), enables computers to learn from data and improve their performance over time without explicit programming. In lay terms, machine learning allows systems to identify patterns, predict outcomes, and adapt based on new information, significantly enhancing decision-making capabilities. Sustainable innovation through computing-integrated STEM education arises when learners leverage machine learning tools to address local and global challenges, fostering innovative approaches that are effective, efficient, and environmentally responsible. For instance, learners can create predictive models to manage agricultural resources, optimize energy consumption, or improve healthcare systems, all issues that are particularly pertinent to G-77 developing countries.

95. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at enhancing the competences of 80 teacher educators from the participating countries in integrating computing and machine learning into STEM education. Specific activities include intensive workshops, collaborative lesson planning, follow-up mentoring, and establishing regional communities of practice, contributing to sustainable educational innovation.

96. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in twelve (12) months, is estimated at US$ 11,892, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 5,946. Other inputs (US$ 5,946) will be provided by Kasetsart University, the submitting institution. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

	Total contribution (US$)
Item	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	1,500	0	1,500
Travel	2,500	0	2,500
Training	1,500	2,500	4,000
Equipment	0	2,600	2,600
Other	446	846	1,292
Total	5,946	5,946	11,892

97. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 6,000 (rounded up to simplify administrative processing) be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 7 – Empowering community for sustainability OTOP Nawatvithi (Community-based tourism).

98. The Community Development Department of the Ministry of Interior of Thailand, based in Bangkok, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Thailand to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Cambodia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, and Myanmar but no institutions involved from the participating countries were identified in the supporting documentation.

99. Over the past two decades, tourism has played a vital role in Thailand's national development agenda under the 20-year National Strategy. In its initial phase, the strategy emphasized generating consistent income from tourism by establishing internationally recognized standards and quality. Subsequently, it has aimed at distributing tourism benefits across regions and local communities, with a strong focus on sustainable development. One of the key components is the Creative and Cultural Tourism Development Plan which aims at boosting revenue while enhancing the quality of life for citizens, strengthening communities, and promoting sustainable and livable cities based on the principles of Sufficient Economy Philosophy (SEP).

100. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at sharing and promoting regional knowledge exchange and innovation to enhance community skills, preserve cultural identity, improve tourism practices, and strengthen the leadership and institutional capacity of communities to sustainably manage and develop OTOP Nawatvithi (community-based) tourism, and expand market access and visibility of local tourism through strategic promotion and inclusive community-driven branding. Specific activities include a training course focused on empowering communities for sustainable OTOP Nawatvithi tourism and sharing the best practices for achieving self-reliance, as well as a study visit to the best practices model village. Participants will have the opportunity to learn about SEP, sustainable development and the BCG (Bio-circular-green) model through comprehensive lectures, shared best practices and discussions with local communities who have successfully implemented relevant initiatives.

101. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in twelve (12) months, is estimated at US$ 94,900 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 59,900) will be provided by the Thailand International Cooperation Agency (US$ 58,341) and other sources (US$ 1,559). A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

	Total contribution (US$)
Item	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	0	()	()
Travel	35,000	()	()
Sub-contracts	0	()	()
Training	0	()	()
Other	0	()	()
Total	35,000	59,900	94,900

(*) No breakdown was provided in the supporting documentation.

102. The Committee considered that this proposal does not comply with guideline A(f) for utilization for PGTF resources, which requires that for nationally executed projects to be eligible, the cooperative component of the project should be established through the identification and declared interest of and explicit participation by the other participating countries as potential beneficiaries of the activities of the project. Accordingly, written evidence of endorsement should be part of the proposal. In the supporting documentation no institutions of the other participating countries were identified, and no endorsement letters were included. The Committee concluded that, as submitted, the proposal is not eligible for funding, and therefore recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 8 – Integral sanitation project for Lake Roque: Regeneration, collection, pretreatment, and irrigation with effluents from the Punilla Valley, Cordoba.

103. The civil association The Wave, based in Cordoba, Argentina, directly submitted the proposal with the support of the provincial government of the Cordoba province of Argentina. Other participating countries would be Brazil (through the Brazilian Enterprise of Agricultural Research – Embrapa, based in Brasilia) and Mexico (the participating institution not fully identified in the supporting documentation).

104. The San Roque Lake, in the Cordoba province of Argentina, is an artificial reservoir and a source of drinking water for 70% of Cordoba city that benefits some 1.3 million inhabitants. However, it faces a critical eutrophication problem, evidenced by the massive proliferation of cyanobacteria, which in certain periods have covered almost two thirds of its 1,600 hectares surface, giving it an intense green color. These cyanobacteria liberate toxins dangerous for human health and the environment, affecting water quality and constituting a risk for public health. These toxins may cause health problems such as gastroenteritis, abdominal pain, vomiting, diarrhea, liver inflammation, and kidney damage to exposed people. Lack of complete domestic sewage networks hinders the optimum functioning of the sanitation system, which contributes to the continuous pollution of the San Roque Lake. To address this problem, it is essential to complete these infrastructures, design and build domestic effluent collection networks and connect them to existing trunk networks to ensure that domestic wastewater is adequately treated and does not reach the reservoir.

105. According to the text of the proposal, the project is a prefeasibility study aimed at addressing the problem from two different perspectives, namely (a) regeneration of polluted waters through evaluation of innovative technologies, such as the Japanese biotechnology EM (effective microorganisms), already tested in lake water samples, which proved to be effective to eliminate the cyanobacteria in three weeks; and (b) comprehensive management of polluting effluents, through the development of a civil engineering project to complete the sewage networks, collect and treat wastewater, and reutilize the treated effluents for forestry and agricultural irrigation.

106. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in twenty-four (24) months, is estimated at US$ 183,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 33,000. Other inputs (US$ 150,000) would be provided by the Federal Council for Investments (Consejo Federal de Inversiones – CFI). It should be noted that there is an inconsistency in the financial figures, since the front page shows a request of US$ 33,000 while in the rest of the document (expected project results and project budget) the requested amount is US$ 29,000. Based on the latter, the breakdown of the total cost is presented on the table below:

	Total contribution (US$)
Item	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	15,000	()	()
Per diems	2,000	()	()
Sub-contracts (water samples analysis)	4,000	()	()
Training	1,000	()	()
Equipment	5,000	()	()
Other	2,000	()	()
Total	29,000	150,000	179,000

(*) No breakdown was provided in the supporting documentation

107. The Committee considered that this proposal does not comply with guideline A(f) for utilization of PGTF resources, which establishes that for nationally executed projects to be eligible, the cooperative component of the project has to be established through the identification and declared interest of and explicit participation by other developing countries, and written evidence of support should be part of the proposal. The supporting documentation does not contain endorsement letters from the participants of other countries and therefore the proposal is not eligible for funding. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 9 – Energy crops in the Southern Cone: winter crucifers to produce biofuels, feed pollinators and increase soil carbon.

108. The Faculty of Agronomics of the Buenos Aires University, based in Buenos Aires, Argentina, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Argentina to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Chile (through the Southern University of Chile -Universidad Austral de Chile, based in Valdivia) and Uruguay (through the National Institute of Agricultural Research – Instituto Nacional de Investigacion Agropecuaria (INIA Uruguay) and the University of the Republic, both based in Montevideo).

109. El Southern Cone of America includes a vast agricultural region that represents between 5% and 20% of GDP of the countries in the region. Agriculture generates 25% of local employment and foreign currency earnings through agro-industrial exports, which account for 50% to 75% of the region's exports. As a result, Southern Cone countries are relevant in the agro-industrial products world market and contribute to global food security. This stems from a combination of natural resources endowment and soil management capacities, new forms of production organization and adoption of modern agricultural technologies. In this connection, farmers aim at maximizing profitability per area unit by selecting the most adequate crops that are better adapted to the environment, with increasing awareness of preserving biodiversity and the quality of environmental resources. Soybeans are the most important summer crops, but the sustainability of agricultural systems requires incorporation of winter crops to rotation to improve the soil's carbon balance because of the low biomass production of soybeans, which has a long-term negative impact on the physical and chemical properties of the soil. The challenge is then to incorporate income-generating winter crops that contribute to the carbon in soil regenerative processes, provide ecosystemic services (to pollinators), and do not excessively delay the sowing of summer crops. Eligible crops include winter crucifers like the canola rapeseed (Brassica napus L.), the carinata (Brassica carinata), and the camelina, for which there is a high demand to produce biofuels, powered by the decarbonization goals.

110. According to the text of the proposal, the objectives of the project are (a) to design a simple quantitative model for a wide range of new genotypes of rapeseed, carinata and camelina utilized in the majority of the Southern Cone countries, based on the sensitivity to the photoperiod (duration of light exposure) and vernalization (exposure to cold temperatures), and (b) to quantify, through field experiments, the contribution of residual, aerial and radical biomass to the carbon balance in the soil, and evaluate the contribution of flower resources to pollinating insects in modern cultivars of rapeseed, carinata and camelina.

111. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in twelve (12) months, is estimated at US$ 85,000, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 50,000) would be provided in-kind by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

	Total contribution (US$)
Item	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	0	()	()
Travel	4,500	()	()
Subcontracts	9,000	()	()
Training	2,000	()	()
Equipment	15,000	()	()
Other	4,500	()	()
Total	35,000	50,000	85,000

(*) No breakdown was provided in the supporting documentation.

112. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

113. This proposal received a relatively lower priority compared to others from the same country and, with a view to providing meaningful funding to those having a relatively higher priority, the Committee recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 10 – Latin American cooperation for the formulation of biofertilizers enriched with beneficial fungi for citrus crops.

114. The Laboratory for Citrus Biological Control of the Pilot Plant of Microbiological Industrial Processes (PROIMI-CONICET), based in San Miguel de Tucuman, Argentina, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Argentina to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Brazil (through the Federal University of Paraiba, based in Joan Pessoa, Paraiba state), Chile (through the Catholic University of Temuco, based in Temuco), Ecuador (through the Higher Polytechnic School of the Coast “Escuela Superior Politécnica del Litoral” -ESPOL, based in Guayaquil), and Mexico (through the Center of Genomic Sciences-CCG, based in Cuernavaca). The Agricultural Experimental Station Famallá, based in Famallá, Tucuman province, Argentina will also participate in the project activities.

115. Argentinean citrus is recognized worldwide because it has a leadership position in lemons production, exports (8th place globally), and industrialization (3rd place). Tucuman province is the most productive center of the country due to its agroclimatic conditions, contributing to approximately 80% of the domestic production. In 2024, citrus exports accounted for some 221,000 tons valued at close to US$ 700 million. The agro-industrial citrus complex is constituted by some 330 packing companies, 75 of which are dedicated to exports, and employ close to 90,000 people during the peak season, which reflects its economic and social importance for the region and the country. However, lemon production faces significant challenges related to the high cost of agricultural inputs (fertilizers and phytosanitary products), which represent 65% of production costs. Moreover, 60% of fertilizers utilized in Argentina are imported and the sharp increase of international prices has generated significant economic pressures to the producers. Intensive utilization of chemical fertilizers has been the response for maintaining profitability but has brought about negative environmental impacts, such as soil erosion, deterioration of the physicochemical and microbiological balances, water pollution due to runoff and percolation of fertilizers, and nitrous oxide emissions associated with the utilization of fertilizers. All these problems threaten the sustainability of the agricultural systems and reduce the resilience of the ecosystems, directly impacting production efficiency.

116. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at identifying sustainable alternatives through the development of biofertilizers, that is organic fertilizers enriched with beneficial microorganisms, such as mycorrhizal fungi and other promoters of plant growth. These biofertilizers have the potential to improve soil quality, optimize the plant nutritional status, and reduce the reliance on chemical fertilizers, contributing to the reduction of the carbon footprint of the agri-food systems in the region. This project aims at bridging the knowledge gap by promoting Latin American cooperation to develop innovative solutions that benefit the producers as well as the environment. Specific activities include (a) obtaining a biological compost with optimized physicochemical properties to be used as biofertilizer. (b) determination of the compatibility of the compost with strains of Trichoderma spp.; (c) reproduction of Trichoderma and formulation of a stable and functional biofertilizer; (d) application of the formulated biofertilizer; and (e) training of human resources and transfer of knowledge on sustainable agriculture.

117. The total cost of the project, to be carried out in twenty-four (24) months, is estimated at US$ 68,691, and the contribution sought from PGTF amounts to US$ 32,691. Others input (US$ 36,000) would be provided in-kind by the submitting institution. It should be noted that there is a discrepancy between the overall figure requested (US$ 32,691) and the sum of the itemized costs presented in the project budget (US$ 34,941). Based on the latter, the breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	0	()	()
Travel and per diems	16,000	()	()
Equipment and consumables	15,193	()	()

118. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

119. This proposal received a relatively lower priority compared to others from the same country and, with a view to providing meaningful funding to those having a relatively higher priority, the Committee recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 11 – Cooperative strategy to interrupt the reproduction of a crop pest snail and zoonotic vector.

120. The Institute of Biochemical Research of La Plata “Prof. Dr. Rodolfo R. Brenner” -INIBIOLP (National Council of Scientific and Technical Research –CONICET) – National University of La Plata, based in La Plata, Argentina, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Argentina to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Brazil (through the University of Sao Paulo, based in Sao Paulo) and Uruguay (through the University of the Republic, based in Montevideo).

121. One of the most resilient and invasive crop pests in the world is the freshwater snail Pomacea caniculata. Native to South America and now spread across Southeast Asia, Africa, Europe and the Americas, the pest snail causes severe agricultural losses particularly in aquatic crops and disrupts wetland ecosystems. Compounding its impact, this species is a vector of the parasitic nematode Angiostrongylus cantonensis, which causes eosinophilic meningitis in humans – a zoonosis now expanding southward in Latin America, facilitated by climate change. A key driver of this snail invasiveness is the extraordinary protection of its eggs, which are virtually free from predation due to the presence of a bioactive molecule (PcPV2) that resists digestion, is heat-stable, displays enterotoxic and neurotoxic activities, and elicits immune responses, properties that may also have biomedical applications. Yet, its full mechanism of action remains poorly understood. Although egg proteins of this species are among the best studied in mollusks, key aspects of PcPV2 membrane interaction and its role in reproduction remain unknown. PcPV2 is synthesized exclusively in the female’s albumen gland, specifically in albumen-secreting cells, and appears to limit reproductive output by constraining the number of eggs a female can produce.

122. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at investigating and potentially disrupting the reproductive success of the pest snail, targeting PcPV2, a key toxin in egg defense, through two strategic approaches, namely (a) characterizing its interaction with membrane sugars and lipids using advanced molecular and biophysical tools, and (b) inhibiting the expression via RNA interference to assess impacts on reproduction. The broader scientific aim is to understand the toxin’s unique mechanism, potentially revealing targets for environmentally safe control methods and new biomedical tools. On a practical level, this work contributes to regional responses to growing problems in agriculture and public health caused by invasive species and zoonotic vectors.

123. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in two (2) years, is estimated at US$ 140,000, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 105,000) would be provided by the submitting institution. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	0	()	()
Travel	5,000	()	()
Equipment	8,000	()	()
Consumables	19,000	()	()

124. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

125. This proposal received a relatively higher priority compared to others from the same country and was selected to be supported. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 35,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 12 – Potential of the oomycete Leptolegnia chapmanii as a biological control agent for the mosquito Aedes aegypti, vector of dengue, yellow fever and other viruses.

126. The Center of Parasitological and Vector Studies -CEPAVE, based in La Plata, Argentina, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Argentina to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Chile (through the Valparaíso University, based in Viña del Mar, and the Southern University of Chile “Universidad Austral de Chile”, based in Valdivia), Colombia (through the Pontifical Xaverian University, based in Bogotá, and the Catholic University of Manizales, based in Manizales), and Paraguay (through the Center for Development of Scientific Research -CEDIC, based in Asunción). Two Argentinean institutions, namely the National Catamarca University, based in San Fernando del Valle de Catamarca, and the Research Institute on non-conventional Energy -INENCO, based in Salta, will also participate in the activities of the project.

127. The Aedes aegypti mosquito is the main vector of viral diseases such as dengue, yellow fever, Zika and Chikungunya in urban areas. This insect is well adapted to the anthropic environment of various Latin American countries. According to the WHO data, the number of reported dengue cases increased from 500,000 in 2000 to 12.6 million in 2024, and 90% are concentrated in Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, and Mexico. In Chile, the mosquito was eradicated in the 1960s but has reappeared in recent years, despite the natural barriers of the Chilean territory (desert, mountains and sea). Dispersion and establishment of mosquitoes in several territories has been favored by deforestation, expansion of the urban and agricultural frontiers, and events associated with climate change. Control of Aedes aegypti includes preventive measures such as elimination of hatcheries and educational campaigns addressed to the population. Although chemicals have proven to be effective, their indiscriminate utilization has negatively impacted health and the environment, in addition to favoring the emergence of populations of resistant mosquitoes. Biological and sustainable alternatives have emerged as a result, like products based on bacteria of the genus Bacillus, which present a low risk for health and the environment. However, there has also been evidence of the development of mosquito populations resistant to these products. While utilization of entomopathogen fungi has been widely explored, there are no commercial products based on microorganisms specifically designed for mosquito control. Regarding oomycetes, some species have aroused interest as pathogens of the mosquito's larvae. In particular, the Leptolegnia chapmanii is highly virulent against Aedes aegypti larvae and other species of sanitary interest, while being innocuous to “non-targeted” aquatic organisms.

128. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at disseminating information on the potential of the oomycete Leptolegnia chapmanii as a biological control agent of the mosquito Aedes aegypti to different audiences, including academia, scientists and communities. Specific objectives are (a) to carry out a search of this species in natural environments, in collaboration with local groups in different regions, to technically train personnel in field and laboratory work; and (b) to increase knowledge of the geographical distribution of this species together with other oomycetes having the potential for developing biological inputs focused on the control of vector mosquitoes. All these activities are oriented towards developing biological alternatives that can be integrated in the management plans of the vector mosquitoes.

129. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in two (2) years, is estimated at US$ 95,000, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 60,000 in-kind) would be provided by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is provided below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	0	()	()
travel	20,000	()	()
Equipment	13,250	()	()
Other	1,750	()	()

130. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

131. This proposal received a relatively higher priority compared to others from the same country and was selected to be supported. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 35,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 13 – Development of a training model for indigenous yeast promoters of healthy and sustainable food.

132. The National Formosa University, based in Formosa, Argentina submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Argentina to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Brazil (through the São Paulo State University “Universidade Estadual Paulista Julio de Mesquita Filho” - UNESP, based in Botucatu city, São Paulo state) and Mexico (through the Center for Training and Education on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (CEESC), based in Mexico City).

133. Food sovereignty encompasses the rights of the people over the land, seeds, and biodiversity, promoting agroecology vs. agribusiness and neoliberal policies. This is an essential approach to ensure food security, protect the environment and promote social justice. Since access to land for indigenous peoples is fundamental for their sovereignty and food security, it is vital to endow young university students pertaining to indigenous communities with tools aligned with this perspective. Food sovereignty aims at guaranteeing access to nutritious foods, culturally adequate, and produced in a fair manner, all this being a key action for achieving food and climate justice. In the Formosa province, the occidentalizing process has transformed the food habits of indigenous populations from traditional ones to consumption of processed foods. Indigenous communities in San Cristobal de las Casas, Mexico and the southern coast of the São Paulo state, Brazil, are facing similar situations. Between 2010 and 2018, high school and college students formed groups which, with the support of teachers, healthcare personnel and journalists, utilized tools such as interviews, direct observation and participative photography to make local problems regarding food and health visible.

134. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at promoting active youth participation through creativity, analysis and action regarding healthy and sustainable eating. Specific objectives are (a) to explore the previous knowledge of the participants regarding the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and healthy and sustainable eating; (b) to develop basic skills on interview techniques, observation, photography and social media; and (c) to strengthen the local eating identity of the participants based on their own thinking, utilizing photography as a tool.

135. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in twenty-one (21) months, is estimated at US$ 290,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 255,000) would be provided by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is presented below:

136. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

137. This proposal received a relatively lower priority compared to others from the same country and, with a view to providing meaningful funding to those having a relatively higher priority, the Committee recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 14 – Antimicrobial activity of silver nanoparticles for the phytosanitary protection of vegetative sugarcane seeds in Cuba.

138. The Cooperative Production Unit “El Encanto”, under the agro-industrial enterprise América Libre, based in Santiago de Cuba, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Colombia (through the Sugarcane Research Center – Centro de Investigación de la Caña de Azúcar – CENICAÑA-, based in Cali), Costa Rica (through the Sugarcane Agro-industrial League – LAICA-, based in Grecia, Alajuela province), India (through the enterprise The Andhra Sugars Limited, based in Tanuku, Andhra Pradesh state), and Mexico (through the Laboratory for Cultivation of Plant Tissues of the Postgraduate College-Cordoba Campus (CONAHCYT), based in Amatlan de los Reyes, Veracruz state).

139. Seeds are any part of a plant having the capacity to originate a new plant. In this regard, stems, cuttings, buds and seedlings are used in sugarcane cultures. Regardless of which part of the plant is utilized, it is important to ensure that there is no mix of different varieties, that seeds are free from insects and harmful agents and with no mechanical damage, and that sprouting and yield are adequate. These qualities will increase the tillering of the culture, favor homogeneous growth of the sugarcane and prevent weed development. Inadequate seed selection may lead to problems having a high economic impact, because it facilitates transmission of plagues and pathogens. Among these, bacterial diseases like Soca rickets, caused by the bacteria Leifsonia xily and the leaf scald, caused by the bacteria Xanthomonas albineans, play a dominant role and account for more than one half of the productivity loss of the sugarcane plantations, contributing to the decline of the main cultivars and requiring the accelerated introduction of new resistant cultivars.

140. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at evaluating the antimicrobial activity of silver nanoparticles for the phytosanitary protection of sugarcane seeds in Cuba. Specific objectives are to evaluate (a) the antimicrobial effect of silver nanoparticles against pathogens that affect the sugarcane seeds (like the bacteria Xanthomonas albilineans and Leifsonia xily); (b) the hormetic effect (beneficial responses to low doses while higher doses might be damaging or toxic) of different silver nanoparticle doses on new sugarcane cultivars multiplied from isolated buds; and (c) the phytotoxic activity of applying different silver nanoparticle doses on new sugarcane cultivars multiplied from isolated buds.

141. The total cost of the project to be completed in twenty-four (24) months is estimated at US$ 72,500, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 37,500) would be provided by the submitting institution and government. A breakdown of the total cost is presented in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)

142. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

143. This proposal received a relatively higher priority compared to others from the same country and was selected to be supported. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 35,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 15 – Options for improving the energy and environmental performance of the sugar-alcohol industry through hybrid schemes by integrating renewable sources and carbon fixation and capture.

144. The Cuban Research Institute of Sugarcane by-products (ICIDCA), based in Havana, Cuba, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Argentina (through the Agro-industrial Experimental station “Obispo Colombres” (EEAOC), based in Tucuman) and Brazil (through the Itajubá Federal University, based in Itajubá). The agro-industrial enterprise “Héctor Molina Riaño” (EAAHMR), based in San Nicolas de Bari, Mayabeque province, Cuba will the subcontractor of the project.

145. Energy transition towards renewable sources is being accelerated due to increase in demand, the need to reduce gaseous emissions and the imperative to achieve sustainable production. In essence, it deals with shifting from burning fossil fuels to a system that utilizes a much wider array of raw materials and alternate sources to meet energy needs. Circular economy should be integrated by design in the energy transition to ensure that the world would have a sustainable energy supply. To this end, concerted action of research institutions, enterprises and regulatory bodies will be required. An energy carrier can be defined as a substance of phenomenon that can be used to produce mechanical work and/or heat or to operate physical or chemical processes. In the sugarcane agroindustry, process streams such as bagasse and crop residues, in addition to being first-generation energy carriers directly utilized as fuels in steam boilers, may be utilized as raw materials to produce second-generation energy carriers such as ethanol.

146. According to the text of the proposal, the overall objective of the project is to study the energy routes to be considered in the diversification of the sugarcane industry, to be deemed as a typical case of circular bioeconomy aimed at the generation of energy carriers from renewable sources. Specific objectives are: (a) to develop and validate a procedure for a comprehensive energy assessment geared towards identifying 15% of additional energy generation or savings capacity; (b) to propose a conceptual design model of a bioenergy park in the sugarcane industry through integration of renewable energy sources; and (c) to organize a workshop on bioenergy in the sugarcane agroindustry.

147. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in two (2) years, is estimated at US$ 75,000, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 40,000) would be provided by the Ministry of Science, Technology and Environment (CITMA) of Cuba. A breakdown of the total cost is presented in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)

148. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

149. This proposal received a relatively higher priority compared to others from the same country and was selected to be supported. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 35,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 16 – Production and application of agricultural inoculants with antifungal activity derived from sugarcane vinasses in a circular economy model.

150. The sugarcane enterprise “Villa Clara”, based in Santa Clara, Villa Clara province, Cuba, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Argentina (through the Industrial Microbiological Processes Pilot Plant (PROIMI-CONICET), based in San Miguel de Tucuman) and Mexico (through the Faculty of Chemical Sciences of the Coahuila Autonomous University, based in Saltillo, Coahuila state).

151. One of the biggest problems in today's agriculture is caused by pathogenic microorganisms that affect plant health. At least 20 to 40% of losses result from phytopathogenic infections that represent US$ 40 billion worldwide. Phytopathogens, including viruses, bacteria, fungi and nematodes, constitute a global threat to agricultural food production. Phytopathogenic bacteria and fungi affect all plants used for food, colonizing their surface and tissues. These microorganisms cause symptoms such as spots, blights, cankers, tissue rot and hormonal imbalances that lead to excessive growth, atrophy, root branching, among others, which negatively affect the global food supply. Indiscriminate use of chemicals in agriculture and animal production to combat disease and increase yields causes a toxic load of consideration for crops, the environment and society, which also extends to the conservation of fruits and vegetables during storage. Microorganisms produce a broad spectrum of antibiotics and antimicrobial volatile organic compounds and a variety of enzymes that degrade the cell wall of some microorganisms and induce resistance in plants against pathogens. Production and release of secondary metabolites depends on several factors such as nutritional, biological and environmental conditions. Furthermore, they can be induced or activated by other organisms when they invade soil space, competing for available nutrients.

152. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at implementing circular production models that allow for the use of by-products, promote economic growth and generate employment without compromising the environment. Specifically, the project involves utilization of vinasse, a by-product of ethanol production from sugarcane, for generating new value chains and mitigating the environmental impact of this effluent. In this connection, the project expects to (a) design a technological process to produce bio-products for the biological control of phytopathogenic microorganisms based on antimicrobial metabolites; (b) assess at least three applications of agricultural interest; and (c) provide training to professionals and small producers.

153. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in two (2) years, is estimated at US$ 110,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 75,000) will be contributed by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is presented below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)

154. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

155. This proposal received a relatively lower priority compared to others from the same country and, with a view to providing meaningful funding to those having a relatively higher priority, the Committee recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 17- Sustainable production of microplastic-degrading recombinant enzymes via sugarcane co-product valorization.

156. The Holguin Sugar Company, based in Holguin, Cuba submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Argentina (through the Industrial Microbiological Processes Pilot Plant – PROIMI-CONICET-, based in San Miguel de Tucuman) and Mexico (through the Institute of Biotechnology of the National Autonomous University of Mexico -UNAM- based in Cuernavaca, Mexico state)

157. Plastic pollution, particularly microplastic accumulation, represents a global environmental crisis. Microplastics, due to their small size, are pervasive in marine, freshwater, and terrestrial ecosystems, posing threats to biodiversity and human health. Enzymatic degradation of plastics is a promising sustainable alternative to conventional physical and chemical processes. Sugarcane is one of the world's most widely cultivated crops and its industrial processing generates large volume of co-products such as bagasse, molasses and vinasse. These residues are rich in carbon, nitrogen and micronutrients, making them attractive feedstocks for biotechnological applications, including microbial fermentation.

158. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at developing bioprocesses for low-cost production of microplastic-degrading enzymes using sugarcane co-products. Specific objectives are to (a) identify and characterize effective plastic-degrading enzymes; (b) optimize recombinant expression systems for high-yield enzyme production in microbial hosts (e.g. Pichia pastoris); (c) formulate sugarcane co-product-based fermentation media for recombinant enzyme production; (d) evaluate the enzyme activity on microplastic substrates; and (e) assess the scalability and technoeconomic feasibility of the processes.

159. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in two (2) years, is estimated at YSS$ 35,000, the totality of which is the amount requested from PGTF. A breakdown of the total cost is presented in the table below:

	Total contribution (US$)
Item	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	2,000	0	2,000
Travel	7,000	0	7,000
Subcontracts	2,000	0	2,000
Training	10,150	0	10,150
Equipment	8,000	0	8,000
Other	5,150	0	5,150
Total	35,000	0	35,000

160. The Committee considered that this proposal does not comply with guideline A(m) for utilization of PGTF resources, which establishes that project proposals should include inputs from other sources of an amount at least equal to the resources requested from PGTF, and these inputs should be secured by the sponsors prior to submitting the proposal. Since the proposal contains no input from other sources, PGTF cannot provide support to this proposal.

161. The Committee concluded that, as submitted, the proposal is not eligible for funding and recommended that it should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 18- Technical training for Cuba, Dominican Republic and Mexico in the management, utilization and exploitation of sargassum.

162. The Climate Foundation IRIS, United for the Climate (Fundación Climática IRIS, Unidos por el Clima), based in Havana, Cuba, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Dominican Republic (through the Dominican Foundation for Marine Studies (Fundación Dominicana de Estudios Marinos Inc.) -FUNDEMAR, based in Bayahibe) and Mexico (through PROPLAYAS Riviera Maya, based in Solidaridad, Quintana Roo state).

163. Evidence of climate change in the Caribbean coupled with the climate outlook for these countries show that cities, populations and coastal communities are and will be severely affected, as a result of increasing intensity and frequency of extreme hydrometeorological events and change from a humid tropical climate to a subhumid tropical climate, having more arid characteristics that significantly impact the property built in the coastal areas, the environment and the functioning of the ecosystems. To face this problem, an integrated view of all the natural and human processes is needed, through an ecosystemic vision that allows for coherent and sustainable solutions for protecting the populations and their interests, as well as the landscape and the ecosystems. To this end, Cuban professionals have developed training and preparation activities on climate change, disaster risk reduction and biodiversity oriented to local sustainable development in vulnerable communities of the Caribbean region. In addition to the above-mentioned dangers a new one has emerged: presence of sargassum in the Caribbean beaches and coasts that crash heads-on with the idyllic image of the region: turquoise waters and white sand beaches associated with coral reefs, overwhelmingly affecting tourism that represents a fundamental source of income for 35 states and territories in the Great Caribbean. It is not the first time sargassum accumulates on the Cuban coasts and finding a solution concerns both the government and private sectors. An added problem, which might be even more serious for the Cuban economy, is the impact on the present coastal ecosystems, seagrass, mangroves and wetlands in general, including all the wildlife and fisheries resources of the country.

164. According to the text of the proposal, the overall objective of the project is to organize the bases for preparing a regional project aimed at the comprehensive utilization of sargassum in the areas of the Great Caribbean where this alga accumulates. It is intended to provide in-situ training taking advantage of the experience of Mexican and Dominican specialists in the management and utilization of sargassum for the benefit of marine-coastal communities highly vulnerable to extreme hydrometeorological events, with the possibility of transmitting these learnings to other Caribbean countries facing the same situation. Main project activities include field visits, training workshops and courses, and awareness building campaigns.

165. The total cost of the project, to be carried out in two (2) years, is estimated at US$ 75,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 40,000) will be provided by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is presented in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)

166. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is thus eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

167. This proposal received a relatively lower priority compared to others from the same country and, with a view to providing meaningful funding to those having a relatively higher priority, the Committee recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 19 – Development of capacities for the implementation of national urban policies in Latin American and Caribbean countries.

168. The National Institute for Territorial and Urban Planning (INOTU), based in Boyeros, Havana, Cuba, submitted the proposal through the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations. Other participating countries would be Honduras (through the Housing and Human Settlements Program (CONVIVIENDA), based in Tegucigalpa) and Mexico (through the Secretariat for Agricultural, Territorial and Urban Development (SEDATU), based in Mexico City).

169. The New Urban Agenda (NUA) results from the Third United Nations Conference on Sustainable Urban Development, Habitat III, held in Quito, Ecuador, in October 2016 and reinforces the commitments of 193 countries to achieve long term sustainable urban development. The cities have been recognized as the epicenter of economic growth and catalysts of innovation and change. They are home to the political and governance institutions needed to promote the changes required to accelerate sustainable development. With more than 50% of the world population living in urban areas, cities are in a fundamental position to bring about the structural change needed to move from the unsustainable consumption patterns prevailing in the current development models to more sustainable ones.

170. According to the text of the proposal, the objectives of the project are: (a) to establish strategic alliances and advance the sustainable urbanization and human settlements agenda among the participating countries; (b) to propose innovative solutions for sustainable urban development projects, best practices and cutting-edge solutions to address the challenges of housing, transportation, energy, and climate change; and (c) to expand and disseminate exchanges and collaboration regarding implementation of the New Urban Agenda.

171. The total cost of the project, to be carried out in two (2) years, is estimated at US$ 80,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. The source of other inputs (US$ 45,000) is not identified in the supporting documents. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	2,000	()	()
Travel	12,000	()	()

172. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

173. This proposal received a relatively lower priority compared to others from the same country and, with a view to providing meaningful funding to those having a relatively higher priority, the Committee recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 20- Cultivation of coconut.

174. “We are for you organization (WFYO)”, a non-governmental organization based in Vavuniya, Sri Lanka directly submitted the proposal. No other participating countries were identified in the supporting documentation.

175. About 70% of Sri Lanka’s coconut production is for local consumption, causing a huge shortage of coconuts required for coconut-related industries. To solve this problem, it is necessary to increase the productivity of coconut lands, introduce new coconut varieties with high production potential, use soil conservation methods to prevent soil erosion, apply organic matter to the soil, and carry out insect and pest control.

176. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at contributing to generate a permanent side income of low- and middle-income earners and to maintain it as an environmentally friendly cultivation model for the area.

177. The total cost of the project is estimated at US$ 35,000, the totality of which is the contribution requested from PGTF. The supporting documentation does not indicate the duration of the project and does not provide a detailed budget for the project.

178. The Committee considered that both the scope and activities of the proposal correspond to a project of national nature, which is not eligible for funding according to the provisions of guideline A(f) for utilization of PGTF resources. Furthermore, the proposal does not comply with guideline A(m), which establishes that inputs from other sources should be at least equal to the resources requested from PGTF. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Project proposal No. 21- Development of special welding consumables for the repair of equipment used in the manufacture of construction materials.

179. The Federal University of Minas Gerais (UFMG), based in Belo Horizonte, Brazil, directly submitted the proposal. Other participating countries would be Cuba (through the Central University “Marta Abreu” of Las Villas (UCLV), based in Santa Clara, Villa Clara province) and Mexico (through the Materials Research Institute of the National Autonomous University of Mexico (IIM-UNAM), based in Morelia, Michoacan state).

180. In the construction sector, numerous are exposed to various wear mechanisms, including the hammers and jaws of mineral crushing mills, as well as parts of machinery used in earthmoving, mineral transportation and drilling. The recovery of these components typically requires high-alloy high-cost welding consumables, such as tungsten, molybdenum, and titanium. Given the high cost of these materials, a technically and economically viable alternative is to manufacture them using resources available in the participating countries, primarily polluting industrial waste. One of the most widely used lower-cost alloying elements in the development of abrasion-resistant materials is chromium, which can be sourced from refractory chromite deposits, of which there are significant reserves in the participating countries.

181. According to the text of the proposal, the general objective of the project is to develop special welding consumables (Flux-controlled arc welding -FCAW- and shielded metals arc welding -SMAW) using mineral resources from the participating countries, as well as polluting industrial residues, for the repair of components in the construction materials industry subjected to severe wear. Specific objectives are (a) to establish formulations for FCAW wires and SMAW coated electrodes using materials available in the participating countries, capable of producing wear-resistant weld deposits; and (b) to manufacture FCAW wires and SMAW electrodes with technological properties that ensure the deposition of weld overlays with an acceptable level of structural integrity and soundness.

182. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in two (2) years, is estimated at US$ 64,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 32,000. Other inputs (US$ 32,000) will be provided by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Travel	9,000	()	()
Subcontracts	2,300	()	()
Training	13,000	()	()
Equipment	4,200	()	()
Other	3,500	()	()
Total	32,000	32,000	64,000

(*) No breakdown was provided in the supporting documentation.

183. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 32,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 22- Innovation and sectoral cooperation for sustainable development: boosting financial inclusion, sustainable agriculture and energy transition in Latin America and the Caribbean through South-South and Triangular Cooperation mechanisms.

184. The Permanent Secretariat of the Latin American and Caribbean Economic System (SELA), based in Caracas, Venezuela, directly submitted the proposal. The proposal has the required governing body endorsement through the decisions by the Latin American Council of SELA held in December 2024, which ratified the status of SELA as the regional focal point for technical cooperation among developing countries (TCDC) and adopted by program of work of the Secretariat, including holding on an annual basis the meeting of directors of international cooperation of the region. Participating countries would be the 23 member countries of SELA, namely Argentina, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Bolivia, Colombia, Chile, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

185. In the current context of Latin America and the Caribbean, innovation and sectoral cooperation emerge as fundamental pillars to address sustainable development challenges, especially in critical areas such as financial inclusion, sustainable agriculture and energy transition. Despite the progress made in recent decades, the region faces persistent socioeconomic inequalities, environmental vulnerabilities, and structural constraints that hinder its progress towards more equitable and resilient development. Financial inclusion remains limited, with large segments of the population lacking access to formal financial services, which restricts their ability to invest in productive activities and improve their economic wellbeing. In agriculture, traditional practices prevail which, although culturally rooted, are often unsustainable and inefficient, exacerbating environmental degradation and food insecurity. At the same time, dependence on fossil energy sources and obsolete energy infrastructure hinder the transition to cleaner and more sustainable energy systems. Against this backdrop, South-South and Triangular Cooperation (SSTC) is a key strategy to foster the exchange of knowledge, technologies and successful experiences among countries in the region and with external partners, promoting solutions adapted to local realities and strengthening institutional capacities to implement innovative and effective public policies.

186. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at (a) presenting an overview of the main initiatives developed by specialized international organizations, Latin American and Caribbean governments, the private sector and academia to strengthen innovation and sectoral cooperation on financial inclusion, sustainable agriculture and energy transition within the framework of SSTC; (b) identifying institutional frameworks and guiding principles that contribute to the acceleration of innovation and sectoral cooperation on financial inclusion, sustainable agriculture and energy transition, as a contribution to sustainable development and the role of SSTC to facilitate its applicability; and (c) disseminating and exchanging best practices, public policies, and regulatory frameworks for innovation and sectoral cooperation on financial inclusion, sustainable agriculture and energy transition and how to access sources of financing through SSTC projects in the region,

187. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in eighteen (18) months, is estimated at US$ 70,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 24,000. Other inputs (US$ 46,000) would be provided by the submitting institution (US$ 35,300) and other sources (US$ 10,700). A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Travel and accommodation	22,300	42,000	64,300
Logistics and operational expenses	0	4,000	4,000
Other	1,700	0	1,700
Total	24,000	46,000	70,000

188. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 24,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 23- Development of technical capabilities in force and torque metrology.

189. The Technical Laboratory of Uruguay (LATU), based in Montevideo, Uruguay, directly submitted the proposal. Other participating countries would be Bolivia (through the Bolivian Institute of Metrology - IBMETRO, based in La Paz), Chile (through the National Institute of Standardization – INN, based in Santiago), Colombia (through the National Metrology Institute- INM, based in Bogota), Ecuador (through the Ecuadorian Service for Standardization- INEN, based in Quito), Panama (through the National Metrology Center -CENAMEP-AIP, based in Panama City), Paraguay (through the National Institute of Technology, Standardization and Metrology – INTN, based in Asuncion), and Peru (through the National Quality Institute – INACAL, based in Lima).

190. Metrology is the science that studies theoretical and practical aspects relating to the measurement of all magnitudes, such as mass, length, time, pressure, force, torque, and others. It is essential for ensuring accurate and comparable measurements in diverse areas, from science and industry to commerce and healthcare. Its importance lies in ensuring product quality, consumer safety, industrial competitiveness, and the protection of public health. In today's world, many aspects of life depend on measurements. The increasing complexity of modern techniques is accompanied by ongoing demands for greater precision, greater range, and greater diversity of standards in many different domains. Development and improvement of these standards is important at both the international and national levels. Metrology, particularly its study by the BIPM (International Bureau of Weights and Measures) is crucial to the global unification and harmonization of measurements, which benefit science, technology, trade, and society. The BIPM establishes and maintains fundamental measurement standards, ensuring the comparability and accuracy of measurements worldwide, which is essential for scientific advancement, technological innovation, and transparency in international trade. The importance of belonging to the BIPM lies in its primary function of serving as the basis for a single and coherent measurement system worldwide. By consulting the Key Comparison Database (KCDB) of the BIPM, only three national metrology institutes in the region have declared Calibration and Measurements Capacities (CMCs).

191. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at closing the knowledge gaps in the region in torque metrology and force metrology. In this regard, the project seeks to understand and improve torque magnitude measurement capabilities in the region through the design of training, practice, and international comparison programs. The central objective of international comparison is to foster international confidence and maintain the technical capacity of laboratories from the participating countries, while also working toward multilateral and international mutual recognition. The comparison will be recorded in the BIPM database to support countries' measurement and calibration capabilities.

192. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in twelve (12) months, is estimated at US$ 60,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 25,000 in-kind) would be provided by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

	Total contribution (US$)
Item	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	0	13,000	13,000
Travel and per diems	19,000	0	19,000
Equipment	16,000	2,000	18,000
Other	0	10,000	10,000
Total	35,000	25,000	60,000

193. The Committee noted that inputs from other sources (US$ 25,000) are lower than the sum requested from PGTF (US$ 35,000). According to the provisions of guideline A(m) for utilization of PGTF resources, inputs from other sources should be at least equal to the resources requested from PGTF and therefore the maximum contribution that could be provided to the proposal is US$ 25,000. Moreover, the proposal complies with the rest of the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources. Following a review of the detailed budget, the Committee concluded that implementation of the project could be launched with this maximum support.

194. The Committee considered that this proposal, as submitted, is eligible for funding and recommended that US$ 25,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 24.- Airborne environmental genomics: a new approach to monitoring amazonian forests.

195. The San Marcos National Mayor University (UNMSM), based in Lima, Peru, submitted the proposal through the Peruvian Agency for International Cooperation (APCI). Other participating countries would be Brazil (through the Federal Pará University (UFPA), based in Belém do Pará, Pará state), Colombia (through the University of El Rosario, based in Bogota), and Guyana (through the University of Guyana, based in Georgetown).

196. The Amazon rainforest, the planet's largest tropical forest, plays a critical role in global climate regulation and harbors exceptional biodiversity, including many undiscovered species. Plant diversity is particularly fundamental in sustaining Amazonian ecosystem functions, serving as the foundation of trophic networks. Also, plants interact with a wide range of pollinators that support essential ecosystem services. However, climate change, deforestation, habitat fragmentation, and altered weather patterns are accelerating threats to rainforest biodiversity on an unprecedented scale. Monitoring plant diversity is therefore crucial, both to detect early signs of ecological degradation and to inform targeted conservation strategies. Traditional biodiversity assessment methods such as botanical expeditions and taxonomic inventories are essential standard methods for studies in different types of ecosystems, but are labor-intensive, expensive, require expert human resources, and often impractical at the scale and complexity required for effective Amazonian monitoring. Efficient alternatives are urgently needed to support timely, actionable biodiversity insights on a global scale. Recent advances in environmental DNA (eDNA) and Next Generation Sequencing (NGS) offer transformative potential for biodiversity monitoring but still face significant challenges. In this regard, cutting-edge genomic methods such as Targeted Sequencing, whether through Hybridization Capture or Nanopore Adapting Sampling are promising for Amazonian flora monitoring.

197. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at addressing the existing methodological and ecological gaps by developing and validating innovative, scalable, and cost-effective genomic tools for plant biodiversity assessment in the Amazon. It proposed the use of Targeted Sequencing techniques to build genomic reference libraries, alongside a novel approach of employing stingless bees (Tetragonisca angustula) as natural eDNA collectors. Given their role as major pollinators and the botanic complexity encoded in their honey, stingless bees offer an untapped avenue for indirect yet effective plant monitoring across vast and inaccessible rainforest regions. Specific objectives are to assess the comparative effectiveness of two advanced Targeted Sequencing techniques, namely (a) Hybridization-based Capture and (b) Digital Capture (Nanopore Adaptive Sampling) for analyzing environmental samples from a hyper diverse Amazonian rainforest.

198. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in one (1) year, is US$ 71,000, and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. Other inputs (US$ 36,000) would be provided by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is provided on the table below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Test innovation methods for identifying biodiversity in complex ecosystems	11,600	22,000	33,600
Essay newly developed eDNA aspirators in several rainforest areas and conditions	4,000	8,000	12,000
Training in bioinformatics techniques	7,400	0	7,400
Knowledge exchange	12,000	6,000	18,000
Total	35,000	36,000	71,000

199. The Committee considered that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

200. This proposal received a relatively higher priority compared to others from the same country and was selected to be supported. The Committee therefore recommended that this proposal avail from the financing of PGTF and that US$ 35,000 be allocated to this end.

Project proposal No. 25- Regional workshop: Calibration of gas flow standards used in the fields of health (gas analyzers), occupational health and safety (sampling pumps) and development of a calibration guide for gas flow standards.

201. The National Quality Institute (INACAL), based in Lima, Peru, submitted the proposal through the Peruvian Agency for International Cooperation (APCI). Other participating countries would be Bolivia

(through the Bolivian Metrology Institute – IBMETRO, based in La Paz) and Costa Rica (through the Costa Rican Metrology Laboratory (LCM), based in San Jose).

202. Metrology is the science that studies theoretical and practical aspects related to the measurement of all quantities such as mass, length, time, volume, pressure, force, flow, and others. The increasing complexity of modern techniques is accompanied by ongoing demands for greater measurement accuracy, broader scope, and a wider variety of standards across many different fields. Metrology now plays a decisive role in science, industry, trade, and the legal sector worldwide, responding to the growing demand in the health and environmental sectors. In most Latin American countries there are numerous cases linked to the lack of traceability in flow measurements carried out in health and occupational safety activities. The issues range from relatively subtle measurement errors, such as underestimating a sample of contaminant particulate matter or gas to failures in life-support equipment responding inadequately. It is therefore essential that all involved stakeholders take measures such as strengthening preventive maintenance programs and metrological calibration of the most critical equipment, staff training, and recognizing that the quality of measurements has a direct impact on health. This includes incorporating metrological verification into quality management systems in occupational health and hospitals, updating and enforcing regulations to explicitly include metrological traceability of safety and medical devices, and understanding that calibration is a necessary investment to avoid significantly higher future costs.

203. According to the text of the proposal, the project aims at contributing to ensuring the metrological traceability of flow measurements in the health and occupational safety sectors by (a) strengthening the technical competence of personnel from the national metrology institutes in the gas flow quantity, and (b) developing a calibration guideline (procedure) for gas flow standards used in health and occupational safety applications, such as the calibration of pollutant sampling pumps and medical devices. To this end, a regional workshop will be organized, and the developed guideline will be submitted to the American Metrology System (SIM) for dissemination.

204. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in twelve (12) months, is estimated at US$ 56,847 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 32,847. Other inputs (US$ 24,000 in-kind) would be provided by the participating institutions. A breakdown of the total cost is shown in the table below:

	Total contribution (US$)
Item	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	6,447	()	()
Travel	2,400	()	()
Equipment	24,000	()	()
Other	0	()	()

205. The Committee noted that this proposal complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding. However, due to the large number of eligible proposals submitted this year compared to available resources, a two-round prioritization process was carried out, the first one involving the proposals submitted from the same country (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

206. This proposal received a relatively lower priority compared to others from the same country and, with a view to providing meaningful funding to those having a relatively higher priority, the Committee recommended that this proposal should not avail from the financing of PGTF.

Proposal No. 26- Monitoring and analysis of the risk of contamination with foreign genes in native corn in Latin America and the Caribbean.

207. BIOSMINA, in association with the Multidisciplinary Center of Technological Research (CEMIT) of the National University of Paraguay (UNA), based in San Lorenzo, Paraguay, directly submitted the proposal. Other participating countries would be Costa Rica (through the National University of Costa Rica (UNA), based in Heredia) and Cuba (through the Institute for Agricultural Sciences (INCA), based in San Jose de Las Lajas, Mayabeque province).

208. Agricultural biodiversity stems from the intersection of the biological and cultural diversity of a population, it represents a close connection with the ancestors. An important example of this agricultural biodiversity are the native and indigenous corns (Zea mays), which is extended throughout the Americas and closely linked not only to the food intake but to the culture of many peoples of the region. This diversity is crucial for long-term food security since it provides the genetic material required for developing varieties capable of facing future environmental and biological challenges, in addition to being a key factor in reserving culture and traditions. However, we are witnessing an inflexion point where biological richness may be reduced and hence all the work carried out by our ancestors may be at stake. Risk factors associated with the loss of agricultural biodiversity are the commercial maize crops, products of genetic engineering, that may lead to undesirable interbreeding with local corn and fixate these foreign genes in the native and indigenous corns. Several studies have shown the presence of transgenic genes in native and indigenous corn even in remote areas with no commercial transgenic crops, which suggests pole dissemination through wind or insects, and the unintentional use of contaminated seeds. Genetic contamination may homogenize the populations of native corn, thereby reducing their unique genetic diversity and adaptation to specific local conditions. Many transgenic corn varieties are tolerant to herbicides such as glyphosate, which may require higher doses and lead to the emergence of resistant weeds, calling for even stronger herbicides. In several Latin American countries cultivation of transgenic corn is permitted, causing a constant concern for its possible impact on the numerous varieties of native corn that still exist, especially in peasant and indigenous communities.

209. According to the text of the proposal, the overall objective of the project is to monitor and carry out a risk analysis of contamination of native corn with foreign genes in the participating countries. Main activities are (a) training in each participating country on monitoring and risk analysis; (b) collection of native corn seeds; (c) molecular analysis of the collected seeds; and (d) dissemination of results through social media and in scientific events.

210. The total cost of the project, to be implemented in two (2) years, is estimated at US$ 70,000 and the contribution requested from PGTF amounts to US$ 35,000. The source of other inputs (US$ 35,000) is not identified in the supporting documents. A breakdown of the total cost is provided below:

Item	Total contribution (US$)
	PGTF	Other	Total
Personnel	0	()	()
Travel	4,000	()	()
Subcontract A	18,000	()	()
Subcontract B	9,000	()	()
Other	4,000	()	()
Total	35,000	35,000	70,000

(*) No breakdown was provided in the supporting documents.

211. The Committee considered that this proposal, as submitted, complies in general with the guidelines for utilization of PGTF resources and is eligible for funding., and recommended that US$ 35,000 be allocated to this end.

Project INT/00/K08 – “Support to the Committee of Experts” – Contribution Agreement

212. Project INT/00/K08 supports the work of the Committee of Experts. Allocations of US$ 30,000 in 2007, US$ 40,000 in 2008, and US$ 35,000 in 2009 were approved with a view to providing the resources to hold up to a maximum of two meetings of the Committee per year, as established in guideline B(i) for utilization of PGTF resources. This allocation was based on actual costs of the meetings of the Committee, which averaged US$ 15,000 per meeting from 1998 to 2005, but increased to US$ 18,000 in 2006, US$ 20,000 in 2007 and US$ 22,500 in 2008. In 2009, the cost per meeting was also US$ 22,500 and in 2010 it increased to US$ 25,000. In 2011, the estimated cost per meeting was reduced to US$ 22,000 because only four of the six members would come from their capitals, but the cost increased to US$ 25,000 in 2012 as a fifth member came from his capital. Estimated cost for 2013 was reduced to US$ 20,000 as only four members would come from their capitals.

213. Due to the limited resources available, in 2009 the Committee recommended that the allocation be reduced from two to one meeting per year and this practice has been followed in subsequent years. As a result, no further allocation was made to the budget of project INT/00/K08 for 2010 and the balance of funds in the project was utilized to cover costs for that year.

214. In 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014 the Committee recommended allocating respectively US$ 30,000, US$ 22,000, US$ 20,000, US$ 20,000, and US$ 25,000 to cover the cost of one meeting each year, as well as the funds needed for dissemination and resource mobilization activities.

215. In late 2014, a Contribution Agreement was signed between PGTF and UNOSSC, aimed at providing the funds to support the costs of holding the Committee meetings and expenses related to fund raising and dissemination of PGTF activities. The unspent balance of allocations made to project INT/00/K08 was transferred to the new mechanism. In 2015 a new multi-year Contribution Agreement was signed to provide continuity to the support to the Committee of Experts.

216. In 2015, 2016, 2017, 2018, and 2019 the Committee recommended allocating US$ 25,000, US$ 30,000, US$ 20,000, US$ 25,000, and US$ 20,000 to cover the cost of one meeting each year, as well as the funds needed for dissemination and resource mobilization activities. Allocations assumed participation of the six members of the Committee coming from their respective capitals or postings and actual expenses were some years lower because some members were unable to participate in the meetings. Unspent balances of each year were added to the budget for following one to minimize annual allocations, which would be around US$ 35,000 per year in the absence of budget rollovers.

217. Due to the Covid-19 pandemic related travel limitations and inability to hold in-person meetings, the Committee held its 2020 meeting in a virtual format with all the members participating from their respective locations and therefore no travel expenses were incurred. Since at that time there was no firm indication of what the situation might be in 2021, the Committee recommended making an allocation of US$ 15,000 for 2021, mainly to be used for the promotion of the Fund and a new resource-mobilization strategy.

218. The 2021 meeting of the Committee was also held in a virtual format with all the members participating from their respective locations and therefore no travel expenses were incurred. Due to the above, the Committee recommended that no allocation be made for 2022.

219. Under the assumption that the 2023 meeting of the Committee would be held in-person, the associated travel expenses were to be funded from the unspent balance available by end-2022. In addition, in 2023 a special dissemination and resource mobilization effort was planned to be carried out on the 40th anniversary of the United Nations General Assembly Resolution that established PGTF. To this end, the Committee at its 2022 meeting in virtual format recommended making an allocation of US$ 10,000 for 2023.

220. The 2023 meeting of the Committee was in fact held in-person with the participation of five members of the Committee coming from their respective capitals or postings. Total costs for holding the meeting were US$ 27,600 and it was expected to incur additional expenses in 2023 associated with the above-mentioned resource-mobilization efforts. Estimated costs for 2024 were US$ 35,000 and to this end the Committee recommended allocating US$ 20,000, the difference to be funded from the unspent balance available by-end 2023. The Committee agreed to hold its 2024 meeting in virtual format, and hence it did not incur travel and living costs. The Committee therefore recommended that the US$ 20,000 allocation made in 2023 be utilized to meet the costs of the 2025 meeting of the Committee and that no additional allocation to this end be made in 2024. Likewise, the 2025 meeting of the Committee was again held in virtual format and the Committee concluded that no additional allocation would be required for 2026, the expenses of which would be funded by the unspent balance available by end-2025.

222. According to the information provided by UNOSSC, uncommitted resources in 2025 amount to US$ 371,952, including the projected interest earnings from 1 January to 31 December 2025. These uncommitted resources are the difference between total assets as of 30 June 2025 (US$ 8,427,148) and the core capital (US$ 7,000,000) plus liabilities (US$ 1,055,195), the latter consisting of the reserve for commitments to approved projects. A detailed breakdown of the financial status of PGTF is provided in Annex IV.

223. Total resources requested by the eligible proposals recommended for adoption on the table above are US$ 332,000. Resources available (US$ 371,952) were enough to meet the full amount requested by these proposals, and the unallocated resources at this meeting (slightly under US$ 40,000) will be available for supporting new projects in 2026. Actual allocations in 2025 to the proposals were made based on priorities derived from the specific merits of the proposals, country and regional coverage, and equitable geographical distribution. It should be noted that the selected eligible proposals were the result of a two-round prioritization process. In the first round, eight (8) proposals that complied with the guidelines were not selected at this time because of the application of the equitable geographical distribution principle established in the guidelines. In the second round, prioritization was reflected in the respective allocations recommended for the selected eligible proposals (cf. paragraphs 54 and 55 of this report).

IV. ASSESSMENT OF THE IMPLEMENTATION OF APPROVED PROJECTS

226. According to the status of their implementation, approved projects can be grouped into several categories:

- (a) Projects completed.
- (b) Projects under implementation.
- (c) Projects under preparation still to be implemented.
- (d) Projects cancelled, and allocated funds reverted to PGTF.
- (e) Projects under query.

227. Completed and cancelled projects could be considered inactive, and their main features are included as a reference in Annex II.

A. Projects under implementation

228. Fifty-nine (59) approved projects were being implemented as of the date of the fortieth meeting of the Committee of Experts. This total is the result of sixty-four (64) projects that were under implementation during the period between the thirty-ninth and thirty-ninth meetings of the Committee, plus twelve (12) that commenced implementation during this period, minus seventeen (17) that were completed. Detailed information on the status of these projects is provided below:

As such, it should not be counted as an additional new project in the follow-up of the implementation of approved projects.

231. The available funds were utilized to support the meetings of the PGTF Committee of Experts from 2001 to 2006, according to the details provided below:

Otherwise, the project would be automatically cancelled and allocated funds would be reverted to PGTF.
